(REVISION) We would like to express our gratitude to everyone who worked together on this project. From the beginning, we've had a lot of players from all over the world, but for the sake of our players, we decided to shut down the servers. We believe that we could have accomplished a lot if we continued on, but a resolution that was more optimal for everyone was necessary to tell us that. We will continue to do our best to give you players joy with new titles. Thank you. THIS GAME IS NOT INTENDED TO BE PLAYED BY CHILDREN. ## Features Key:

The Lords of Elden Ring that you met in the game are all people of Elden Ring, or who has risen, along with a rich and expressive lore.

A Vast World Full of Excitement - A vast open world where you can wander freely. Create Your Own Character - In addition to being defined by your appearance, you can freely change the weapon you equip and level up at the same time.

An Epic Drama and a Multilayered Story - An epic story with rich characters that echoes a thrilling drama, including puzzle parts.

An Online Element that You Can Feel Your Presence - An online element that you can feel is up to an unprecedented level and does not manifest any offline element.

A warrior tempered with justice, an assassin depicted with compassion...

Listen to the true voice of each character as they share the troubles they faced in the Lands Between.

Shepherd a herd of powerful and loyal guardians, and protect the deepest and brightest hopes of the human world. I want to create a roleplaying game that evolves, in which I hope to encourage many players to immerse themselves in the worlds they create.

Just like you I'm here pushing for you guys to play this game before April 30. I want to say that this game is going to change the other RPs I've played in the last year. We need to "Move the rock up the hill" and make sure this game lives in the hands of people that want to play fantasy rpgs. I think this game could well be the same in terms of what to expect from [Fantasy action RPG] Dark Souls gameplay. It has an extremely simplistic yet entertaining story and with a lack of extraneous action elements. Like Dark Souls, it wastes no time and moves at a fast pace without going overboard. What makes this game great is that they have carefully crafted very deep, lore-heavy but easy to understand storylines with very little details. They go from people being very happy, to people being very sad and when they gather the seeds for the next age, they bring them to a specific place, then they can be distributed. This means "A Certain Fate" will be concluded at the end of the game

--Kadokawa Games official review "So, Tarnished states that it wants to provide you with the complete fantasy action RPG, but does it accomplish this goal?... If you're not a fan of the turn-based action genre, you may want to stay away from Tarnished, as the lack of a real-time battle system will definitely affect you.... The text-based battle system and character creation process could be rather confusing at first. However, the game's support system will guide you towards the right path, making the learning curve significantly easier.... While the game's character and battle systems take some time to master, Tarnished is one of those games that are worth trying regardless of the genre you usually play." --Soft Gaming "... On the whole, Tarnished is a very well-done game, and it's definitely a game that should be in your Steam library. The story is great, the characters are well-written, and all the gameplay is really well-done in this game.... There are no other spell cards or skill cards in the game, which is extremely uncommon in a card-based RPG. The enemies in the game are strong, while the playable characters are weak. There are multiple difficulties to choose from, and the game is well-paced, so it shouldn't be hard to play through at all.... If you're an RPG fan, definitely try Tarnished. It's a fantastic RPG with a great story." --i-parade "Tarnished promises to be a more enjoyable take on the turn-based action role-playing genre, and it totally delivers.... I was surprised by how many changes are made to the gameplay of the genre, and Tarnished does feel that it has really developed a unique take on the type of RPG it wants to offer.... There are some minor issues with the text-based battle system, but it's something that you will get accustomed to in time, and the game does offer a good amount of help for learning the controls.... Tarnished feels that it wants to bring a new experience to the table for those who are looking for a well-made RPG." --V-Plus "Fantasy action RPG with an original story full of wit and charm." --Closer " bff6bb2d33

Q: How to use Promises.all or Promises.race to wait when parent and child promise resolves

The problem is that I want to wait for all the child promise to resolve and use the result of all them. I have this code:

const parent = new Promise((resolve) => resolve(1)); let j = 0; child1 = new Promise((resolve) => { setTimeout(() => { resolve(10); }, 1000); }); child2 = new Promise((resolve) => { setTimeout(() => { resolve(20); }, 2000); }); Promise.all([parent, child1, child2]).then(function(values) { console.log(values[0]); });

The answer should be 1 but I'm getting a never resolved promise. What am I doing wrong?

A: Promise.all([parent, child1, child2]) This is a race condition in which the first promise to resolve successfully will cause the other two promises to resolve. What am I doing wrong? You're resolving the parent too early. This Promise.all([parent, child1, child2]).then(function(values) { console.log(values[0]); }); should be this Promise.all([parent, child1, child2]).then(function(values) { console.log(values[0]); parent.resolve(values[0]);
