To compare the relationship of the recurrent laryngeal nerve (RLN) to thyroid cartilage (TC) as found at medicolegal autopsy vs autopsy records by the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center Histopathology Tissue Evaluation Committee. Autopsy reports were obtained for cases where death was due to external causes between 1988 and 1997. These records were correlated with autopsies reports of the Thyroid Pathology Service. In each case, the RLN was examined for location relative to TC and the organs within the neck. In most cases with a known cause of death, the RLN lay beneath the TC. Some 17.6% of the larynges examined in the medicolegal autopsy cases were attributed to violence (death by injury) while 83.9% of the larynges in the Thyroid Pathology Service cases were attributed to neoplasia. In almost all cases of medicolegal death (96.2%), the RLN lay below the TC. In most cases of neoplasia (83.9%), the RLN lay inferiorly to TC. These results suggest that the proximity of the RLN to TC may be related to the cause of death.Q: Android, Ajax POST: AsyncTask does not exist I have a class which extends AsyncTask. I use this

Our objective was to determine the frequency of lumbar radiculopathy and its evolution in patients with simple hypothyroidism and to examine the impact of various factors on radicular symptoms. Serial epidemiological cross-sectional surveys. The study was conducted in outpatient clinics. Patients who were clinically hypothyroid and who had no other thyroid disease were evaluated in the study. The exclusion criteria were history of previous neck surgery, operation in the treatment of neck or shoulder pain, chronic shoulder pain, and use of thyroid hormone supplements. The first survey was performed within 5 months after the institution of treatment, and the second survey was performed after one year. Complaints of lumbar pain were assessed and graded as follows: Grade 0, not painful; Grade 1, mild, not debilitating; and Grade 2, disabling. The cumulative probability of radicular symptoms was estimated using the Kaplan-Meier method. Four hundred and forty-six subjects participated in the first survey, and 379 completed the second survey. The cumulative probability of Grade 0, 1, and 2 radicular symptoms at 10 years after starting treatment was 66.8%, 48.6%, and 1.6%, respectively. 6d1f23a050
