Most children with idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura (ITP) respond well to steroid therapy. However, not all patients can be successfully treated with this option. The majority of children who fail to respond to standard therapy (glucocorticoids) can be successfully treated with daclizumab, a humanized monoclonal antibody. In a randomized, placebo controlled, double-blind phase I/II trial, 18 patients (median age 7 years, range 1-18 years) with severe chronic or relapsing ITP were treated with single or multiple intravenous infusions of daclizumab 1 mg/kg (n = 12) or placebo (n = 6). The primary endpoint was the time to first remission in responding patients, defined as platelets above  $150 \times 10^9/L$  for 2 consecutive weeks. Daclizumab produced a rapid and significant increase in the number of platelets, and sustained responses were recorded in the majority of patients (9/12). The patients who did not respond to placebo also responded to daclizumab. One patient treated with daclizumab had a minor hypersensitivity reaction. Daclizumab is a promising new immunosuppressive agent in the treatment of chronic ITP. The role of daclizumab in the management of children with ITP needs further exploration
